QSI and ESU LLC resolve disputes about patent infringement

In 2006, QSI Industries sued ESU LLC in front of the United States District Court, Portland/Oregon, for patent infringement. ESU LLC has been accused of using some inventions mentioned in the QSI patents 5,448,142 and 5,896,017 illegally in their LokSound decoders distributed by ESU in the United States. Since 2006, both parties tried to clarify which rights might have been infringed. In the course of the proceedings, ESU LLC and QSI came to the conclusion that it would be beneficial for both sides to settle the case out of court.

Today we may announce that the legal disputes have finally been settled on November 19th 2009. As a part of this agreement, there should be no further legal disputes between QSI and ESU LLC in this matter. ESU will continue to offer the company's LokSound decoders on the American market for private customers and model railroad manufacturers (OEM) as before, ESU customers do not need to fear legal issues anymore. ESU really appreciates the agreement as legal security is now guaranteed. From now on, ESU is able to focus on the further development of products with the aim of providing the best-possible technique for American model railroading fans.
